Blues Artist * Spring Brooks * New Music Release

Trackin'

*Distributed through Sony's the Orchard Available on all platforms April 30th

Breakthrough blues artist Spring Brooks new title, Trackin', will be released Friday April 30th on all music platforms.

Trackin' is a song about reflection for those times during the journey of our lives when we ponder the loss of a relationship or the loss of part of ourselves that we wish we could reclaim. It's for times when we are traveling, change happens quickly, and we struggle to keep pace. As towns fly by, our past flashes in our mind's eye. Are we running towards something or running away? Perhaps both? Will we ever find what we've lost? Or will it linger as a memory, never to rejoin us, like the train tracks that vanish on the horizon appearing ever closer, but never quite touch.

Trackin' was written by Spring Brooks and Mark Robinson, produced by Thomas Hutchings of Artist Without Labels, and is distributed through the Orchard, a Sony company.

"I'm thrilled with how Trackin' came together. It was a challenge creating this song remotely, but I learned a lot about recording, music tools and technology, and how to coordinate when we couldn't be together in one room," said Spring Brooks. "Everyone involved with this song contributed to the overall ambiance. Dave the drummer made his own 'train beat', Mark came up with the idea for a saxophone busker effect, and Thomas magically blended my vocals with the other tracks to produce a musical journey," she added.

As a young Philly native, Spring Brooks was born into blues. Her sound ranges from a whisper to a thunderstorm. While influenced by singers such as Yolanda Adams, Beth Hart, Lizz Wright, James Brown and Nina Simone, her blues is generational, raw and authentic.

With roots in both New York City and Philadelphia, Spring Brooks has performed numerous shows at various live music venues and events in the U.S., Europe and Canada. Spring is always writing and recording new music and looks forward to sharing more with the world very soon.

Spring Brooks recently performed her previous music release, The Times, in the 2021 National Women in Blues Showcase alongside 30 other exceptionally talented blues women. In past years the showcase was held in Memphis, TN. However, this year it was a virtual presentation. While Spring is constantly reinventing herself as an indie blues artist, her style and feel remain true to the Blues.

"Spring Brooks brings a warm and melodic voice with plenty of range, a sweet vibrato and melisma, a heartfelt devotion to the blues, and a feline sexiness on stage that will hold your attention front and center" said music club owner Jamey Reilly of Jamey's House of Music.
